“ Ruth and I attended pottery classes for a few years at JCAC, but it wasn't until after the deaths of my father and her husband, Kent, one week apart that she and I became friends. I think our grief united us and I am grateful for the understanding and love she showed me during the weeks and months of the summer of 2017. I am grateful that I came to know Ruth better because of that time period. In pottery class, Ruth showed so many of the qualities that I recognized as integral parts of her character: strength, courage, creativity, resilience, passion, compassion, love, and fierceness. She loved to try new things. She challenged herself to throw larger and larger balls of clay to make great big bowls and pots. When she made a mistake or the pot got off center or crooked, she tried to work with what she had. She liked to experiment with glazes to a degree, and she often took bottles of glaze home to work on her pots in between classes. She loved her kids and grandkids with her whole being. At times she reminded me of a mother lion fiercely guarding her loved ones, so great was her love. Ruth's gentle compassion toward a classmate who was struggling touched me. She wanted to make sure that the person felt safe and protected, and she showed the tenderness of one cradling a baby bird towards her. To Ruth's family: my heart breaks for you. Know of my love and prayers during this difficult time. Thank you for the gift of Ruth that you shared with us. She was a real treasure. - Briana Craddock

“ I would see Ruth usually every other day riding to our Schnarr Farm on her ATV in the evenings after her work in town was over for the day. She came to feed and check on the horses and cows every evening in our pasture on the farm. She had a love for animals was easy to see. She and I would at times talk together and discuss what was bothering each other at times during the past days, weeks or months. After our talks, I do believe we both felt better afterwards. We both had huge drives on keeping our families farms going successful and strong. We knew we held supportive roles in each family farms operations. Farming and her family was very important to her. She talked about all that very often. She missed Kent terribly but I saw how strong of a person she was in getting through his tragic death and back on her feet again! She was a strong willed person that held her heart on her sleeve. Ruth, I will miss you and our conversations together and how we showed support for each other and our families through the difficult days of "life." My heart breaks in extreme sadness right now. In time, we will meet each other again as we are promised in the resurrection. May you rest in peace from this day forward, my friend! From: Cheryl (Schnarr) Stemle.
