“ After dad died we needed some help with our new house...we needed a concrete pad poured in the back for our hot tub to sit on. Ed showed up one day and said “let’s take a look”. ...he didn’t say much but pretty soon he was over there preparing the dirt and putting rebar in and a concrete truck showed up. The kids were so excited to see construction happen and I was so grateful that we could put the hot tub on something permanent. I asked what I owed he said “you take care of the concrete and that’s it”....we’ll growing up with him on the farm I knew the running joke of green beans and him (he hated them). Mom and I would pick on him almost every time we got the chance...so I wrote a card out and put a Walmart bag of green beans and the card in his truck....he did not like that and told me so. I like to think we both got a kick out of it...even if he was a little more grumpy than usual. 😊
