“ I did not know Fritz as long as many others have. Fritz did come out here a few times before I myself moved out here permanently - to visit David. I liked him immediately. He was genuine, upbeat and smiled and laughed a lot. He was open and honest with himself and others. He appeared to me to always rise to any occasion - to whatever was going on in his life at the moment. He lived, I believe, in the moment. Not many of us can do that. He is I believe a more complex individual than we ever knew. What I remember about Fritz was his laugh, and he laughed a lot. I was so very sorry to hear of his passing. I liked Fritz very much and only wish that he could have stopped by one more time. Tonight I think of Fritz and his family. Tonight I remember how much I enjoyed his company.
