“ Tammy brought a smile in every situation we encountered caring for her and her family. She stayed positive and steadfast through thick and thin and is an amazing woman. She also has an incredible, loving family. I feel great sadness at her passing. My love and sympathy to her family. May eternal rest be granted to her, oh Lord. May she rest in peace. Amen

“ Met Tammy years ago and we instantly clicked. We referred to each other as “sis” because of our special kinship. 8 years ago we unfortunately bonded because we both had lost a special brother. I will miss her and being able to hold each other up when we would have a down day missing our brothers. Love you Tammy. I’ll see you again some day 🥺

“To my sister-in-law/love, Tammy
She came into my life, unexpectedly, quickly and on the words of a of a sweet song: “Tammy! Tammy! Tammy's in love!” I shared in her wedding, looked for sheet music to the special song for the wedding, and consoled my mother when their “going away outfits” were jeans and denim shirts instead of a suit and fancy dress. I helped them settle into their first apartment. I watched her grow from a young girl into a woman, a mother and a soul mate for my brother.

We shared pregnancy joys and struggles, birthdays, graduations and holiday celebrations. I was even the delivery coach when my brother was unavoidably out of state for my nephew's birth. We lived through hers, mine and ours family squabbles (all families have them). We watched our children play together, grow, start love stories of their own and marry. We shared funny and proud grandchildren stories, she as “Grammy” and I as “Granny”.

Over the years we shared fears, emotional struggles and a love of God - the Supporter and Comforter through it all. She was an encourager as I walked my most difficult life path to becoming a widow. She was always quick to remind me she was there and loving me through it. We shared meaningful posts, funny posts and reminders that we were sisters in love. Just this week I sent her a funny picture of a baby elephant, not knowing she was already on a path away from our earthly relationship.

Today, I sit here still stunned that she will leave my life as quickly and unexpectedly as she came into it. I wonder who will wash the dishes at Christmas dinner, who will send those funny cards that she never forgot to send, and who will listen and understand my frustrations in times of family struggles? I will miss her sweet spirit and her desire to always help others feel comfortable and loved. I know that she lived her life as the song says, “Tammy is in love”. Love for her God, love for her husband, love for her children, love for her grandchildren, love for family and love for others. We will all miss her, but Tammy, you left us a legacy of love to share with others. Thank you for a life well lived and a love that I will always treasure and remember.
