“ I fondly remember Teddy as the low-key, easy-going guy he always seemed to be. As an example, many years ago when we were much younger, he had just bought a new motorcycle and was showing it off to me and several other guys. Asked if I wanted to ride it, I eagerly took him up on his offer, rode down the road and promptly 'drove' it into a muddy ditch. Was Teddy upset when I returned his new motorcycle full of mud? No way!! Just kind of snorted as he laughed and said 'no big deal'. That's the kind of friend everybody always wants and he was willing to be, to me plus countless others. Teddy, along with Judy and their family, are solid examples of the Hoosier hospitality people speak of. They often shared it with my visiting family from Las Vegas especially when we relaxed at Teddy's lake. On behalf of myself and my family, please accept our sincerest condolences for your loss. Teddy is already, and will continue to be, greatly missed.
